

Displaying external data files (using placed html)

A great feature would to be able to display the content of, say a table, saved as an .xls file and saved on the server, on a web page.

This would mean a client could edit ever changing data on the table files, re upload them and they would display the new data on refresh.

Something such as:

Insert Html

```
<script> jQuery.get('http://www.websitename/Files/tableX.xls', function(data) { alert(data);
});
```

This way, designers can get on with designing and let the client change there files. It could be possible to serve all sorts of text and data to the site this way.

This created as a widget would be cool.